Overview

It's common knowledge that South Africa has very much to offer as a birding destination, and the memory of this trip echoes those sentiments. With an itinerary set in one of South Africa's premier birding provinces, the Limpopo Province, we were getting ready for a birding extravaganza. The forests of Magoebaskloof would be our first stop, spending a day and a half in the area and targeting forest special after forest special as well as tricky range-restricted species such as Short-clawed Lark and Gurney's Sugarbird. Afterwards we would descend the eastern escarpment and head into Kruger National Park, where we would make our way to the northern sections. These included Punda Maria, Pafuri, and the Makuleke Concession – a mouthwatering birding itinerary that was sure to deliver.

Detailed Report

Day 1, 24th February 2019 – Transfer to Magoebaskloof

We set out from Johannesburg after breakfast on a clear Sunday morning. The drive to Polokwane took us just over three hours. A number of birds along the way started our trip list; these included Hadada Ibis, Yellow-billed Kite, Southern Black Flycatcher, Village Weaver, and a few brilliant European Bee-eaters. When we turned off from the main road onto the dirt road leading to our guest house we immediately encountered bird activity; Speckled Mousebird, African Stonechat, Yellow Bishop, and the awesome African Yellow Warbler were all on show for us. A Eurasian Hobby sat up high in a dead tree, and the fairly common African Olive Pigeon was seen flying by in a small flock. Later that afternoon we took a short drive and then a walk along the entrance road; this was great as we picked up Cape Grassbird, White-throated and Barn Swallows, Black Saw-wing, Cape White-eye, and Drakensberg and Tawny-flanked Prinias and heard Red-chested Flufftail calling from the vlei alongside us. Our first reptile sighting came in the form of the local dwarf chameleon, Wolkberg Dwarf Chameleon (Bradypodion transvaalense).

Day 2, 25th February 2019 – Magoebaskloof Forests

In typical Magoebaskloof fashion we awoke to mist and rain. Nevertheless we headed out early, accompanied by David, the local expert, BirdLife-South-African-trained guide. We tried one of the Cape Parrot spots first up, but after half an hour of rain, darkness and the sweet songs of Chorister Robin-Chat, Orange Ground Thrush, and Brown Scrub Robin we decided to head down the mountain to the Mamabolo Grasslands to give the dryer acacia-and-savanna species a try. We finally struck gold and managed to get really nice close-up looks at Short-clawed Lark, one of the local specialties. Here we also picked up White-browed Sparrow-Weaver, a displaying African Pipit, Cinnamon-breasted Bunting, Sabota Lark, Neddicky, Southern Grev-headed Sparrow, a breeding pair of Crested Barbets, Kalahari Scrub Robin, and a lovely immature Black Sparrowhawk. We then headed up the mountain again to a site for Gurney's Sugarbird. The cloud cover and wind were still around, but we did have a really nice twenty minutes watching a couple sugarbirds as well as Malachite and Amethyst Sunbirds, Yellowfronted Tinkerbird, Lazy Cisticola, and Cape Robin-Chat. We decided to give the forest another go, but to our frustration all we encountered was heavier and heavier rain and fog. In the pouring rain we did get glimpses of Green Twinspot, Red-backed Mannikin, Tambourine Dove, and Mountain Wagtail, while the presence of Cape Parrot was evident by their loud shrieks; we didn't manage any proper sightings, though. In the unrelenting rain we did manage to see a small group of Samango Monkeys as well as a trio of Woolly-necked Stork near the main road. Unfortunately the rain continued, so we altered our plans and headed straight for Kruger National Park. We made a very brief stop in Tzaneen, were we picked up Magpie Mannikin and Purple-crested Turaco. This night we stayed in Phalaborwa, had a great dinner, and made plans to be at the entrance gate of the park at opening time.

One of the first species of which we managed to get really nice pictures on this tour, Yellowfronted Tinkerbird*

Day 3, 26th February 2019 – Phalaborwa to Punda Maria Rest Camp

A full day in Kruger started off fine with overcast conditions. Groups of Monotonous Larks were very vocal, while a Dusky Lark was seen at the picnic spot en route to Letaba Rest Camp. We also started encountering our first groups of mammals. Impala is the most numerous antelope species in Kruger; this was evident. Plains Zebra and Blue Wildebeest were also very noticeable. The "best animal on four legs" was the inside joke that got thrown around between the three of us when we saw Giraffe each day. A highlight birding-wise, just before we reached Letaba Rest Camp, was a single Kori Bustard moving slowly through a patch of open savanna. Weighing in at anything between 6 and 19 kilograms this is quite an amazing animal and also the world's heaviest flying bird. We also managed some incredible African Elephant sightings and saw in excess of three hundred on the drive between the Phalaborwa Gate and Punda Maria Rest Camp. Other top birds for the morning were Chestnut-backed Sparrow-Lark, Harlequin Quail, Zitting and Desert Cisticolas, Orange-breasted Waxbill, White-winged Widowbird, Common Cuckoo, and a beautiful pair of Temminck's Coursers. We had a really great stop at Mopani Rest Camp for lunch, and after Diederik Cuckoo, Striated Heron, Southern Carmine Bee-eater, Southern Red Bishop, and great cappuccinos we were set to continue the drive to Punda Maria Rest Camp. As we got close to Punda Maria the habitat changed. We passed through some mature mopane woodland and soon thereafter into mature broadleaf woodland with many Pod Mahogany trees; the habitat is lovely. We thoroughly enjoyed a small group of Southern Ground Hornbills about five kilometers from the camp's entrance gate. We watched them foraging for food for a while and then called it a day and headed to the camp to check in. A Kruger-National-Park-sized burger went down well as we chatted about our plans for the next day.

A true beast of a bird, Kori Bustard

Day 4, 27th February 2019 –Punda Maria Rest Camp to Pafuri Camp

This was a truly magnificent day. We started with the Mahoni Loop around Punda Maria, visited Crooks' Corner and the Pafuri Picnic Site area in the middle of the day, and loved our first drive in the Makuleke Concession from Pafuri Camp. The Mahoni Loop was alive with activity, and we encountered two different Wahlberg's Eagles right away; one of them was enduring some harassment from a party of White-crested Helmetshrikes. A little further on the loop we found a few Golden-breasted Buntings, Violet-backed Starling, African Hawk-Eagle, and Brown Snake Eagle, the latter two both perched up high on the ridge line. The Mahoni Loop has some superb scenery with a few really old Baobab trees, an awesome sight for any naturalist. A few Mosque Swallows were cruising around, and later in the morning we encountered a pair of the rather prized White-breasted Cuckooshrike, a really tough bird to pin down anywhere in South Africa. Later we managed really decent views of both Bennett's Woodpecker and Retz's Helmetshrike; two species that hang out in the taller, mature woodland around Punda Maria.

This Wahlberg's Eagle was minding his own business when a noisy group of White-crested Helmetshrikes (which can be seen in the background) started mobbing him.

Upon arrival at Pafuri Camp we had a nice, cool, refreshing drink and made ourselves at home before preparing for our afternoon birding session. We started the afternoon drive at about 4:00 p.m. directly after a quick summer thunderstorm. We were quite surprised to see Marico Flycatcher alongside the likes of Burnt-necked Eremomela, Blue Waxbill, Meves's Starling, and both Marico and White-bellied Sunbirds. One of the roads we tried to access was unfortunately impassable after the rains, but luckily we heard Verreaux's Eagle-Owl call as we turned around and decided to stake out the area. Sure enough, with some eagle-eye sight we picked up this giant of a bird. To be honest, though, they did make it easy for us by calling persistently from the large Nyala Tree. We stopped off at the Luvuvhu River Bridge, another very well-known and frequently-birded location. Here we scanned through the flock of Little Swifts overhead, hoping to pick up a spinetail. We tried for a while with no luck but then managed to find two Böhm's Spinetails, cruising along with their characteristic bat-like flight. Then it was time for a sundowner and a snack or two, coupled with an incredible sunset over the Luvuvhu River.

Little did we know but the best was yet to come: As the light faded a White-backed Night Heron flew in and landed on the sand bank below us – what a treat! It was truly great to see the white on the back showing clearly; this feature of the bird is often not visible.

Just after sunset this incredible species landed on the bank in view from the Luvuvhu Bridge: White-backed Night Heron.

But amazingly our afternoon/evening drive had still more in store for us! We started the short drive back to the camp and stumbled across a young, inquisitive Black-backed Jackal; the youngsters

www.birdingecotours.com

are still rather pale and haven't grown the dark fur on their back yet. And a few meters on we noticed a couple of birds on the ground. "Could they be coursers?" we exclaimed, and, sure enough, they were a pair of Three-banded Coursers – well spotted!

A lovely pair of Three-banded Coursers

Day 5, 28th February 2019 – The eastern Makuleke Concession

Our first full day in the famous Makuleke Concession had begun, and boy, what a sunrise! The story how the concession now is run and flourishes with the help of the Makuleke community is a captivating one. A high proportion of the staff at the lodges here are from the community, and of course a percentage of the profits goes directly back to the community, which originally owned the land. So a good relationship exists here, and one can see it, as the lodges are fantastic and we had an excellent couple of days here. Our first morning drive was to one of the local pans, Reebok Vlei, that had started to fill up after some good rains in the area. On the way there we picked up European and Southern Carmine Bee-eaters, African Grey Hornbill, and a small tree with about two dozen Amur Falcons. White-backed Vultures were hanging out at the tops of large, dead trees. As we arrived at the pan we saw a Trumpeter Hornbill in the fever trees and a couple of Crowned and Blacksmith Lapwings on the ground nearby. We were fortunate to be able to do a walking safari here; the freedom to walk in the Kruger National Park is truly magical and helps the birding to no end! The pan delivered a good few shorebirds, which included the resident Threebanded Plover, the migratory Wood Sandpiper, Ruff, Little Stint, Common Greenshank, and Common Sandpiper. We were very lucky with Dwarf Bittern and found not less than three individuals along the edges of the pan. A few other beautiful resident species were also present, not the least of these was a flock of about four Brown-necked Parrots. Others included Meves's Starling, Green Wood Hoopoe, Red-billed Buffalo Weaver, Grey Heron, Great Egret, Western Cattle Egret, Woodland Kingfisher, African Jacana, and the loud White-crowned Lapwing. We returned to the lodge, where we enjoyed a hearty breakfast while watching a few species from the deck that overlooks the Luvuvhu River. African Fish Eagle, White-fronted Bee-eater, and Red-billed Oxpecker kept us company too, the latter also having breakfast, gleaning ticks and parasites off the local Cape Buffalo.

We met in the afternoon again for a lovely high tea, after which we jumped on the cruiser and headed out again. We again drove east and birded from the vehicle. We enjoyed some casual sightings of a large herd of Cape Buffalo, this time boasting Yellow-billed Oxpecker, and White-browed Robin-Chat, Burchell's Coucal, a few Little Bee-eaters, White-winged Widowbird, Crowned Hornbill. Spotted Flycatcher and Red-backed Shrike flitted between the lower-hanging branches, while Southern Black Tit parties cruised by. We had a few good conversations and shared stories about the African bush and the Kruger National Park as we enjoyed our sundowners in the fever tree forest. On the way from the restaurant back to the rooms we were treated to sightings of both Thick-tailed Greater Galago and Cape Genet! The former was just walking around on the wooden railings a mere few meters from us. It was incredible to see these nocturnal mammals up close.

Dwarf Bittern is a fairly sporadic species, often occurring late in the season after good rainfalls.

Day 6, 1st March 2019 – Western Makuleke Concession

Today we planned to explore some other regions within the concession. In the morning we traveled north-west toward the Limpopo River, and later that afternoon we went to the incredible Lanner Gorge – what a spectacle! Well, at 5:00 a.m. the wake-up calls were happening: Chacma Baboons were the loudest, but Bearded Scrub Robin and White-browed and White-throated Robin-Chats were pretty loud too. We had a bite to eat and some coffee and were off. The Limpopo floodplain was impressive, to say the least, and beautiful Baobab trees lined the rocky ridges on the entrance road. We stopped, jumped out of the cruiser, and immediately picked up Mosque Swallow, Brown-headed Parrot, and European and Lilac-breasted Rollers. A walking safari is always fantastic; this one was no different and we really enjoyed stretching our legs in this pristine environment. It wasn't long before we picked up Lemon-breasted Canary and an African Harrier-Hawk over the floodplain. It also was really exciting to bump into African Elephant

(luckily not literally) while on foot; we approached slowly for some great looks. The rest of the morning produced Bearded Woodpecker, Terrestrial Brownbul, Grey-backed Camaroptera, Yellow-breasted Apalis, Broad-billed Roller, and Little Sparrowhawk. Stierling's Wren-Warbler was our last special for the morning, a tricky species to pin down unless you hear its super-distinctive call.

The afternoon was brilliant. The flora on the way to Lanner Gorge is simply beautiful. On the way, in addition to a really good number of interesting trees and other plants, we also had nice views of Golden-breasted Bunting and a number of interesting butterflies. The views into the gorge are breathtaking, and we then also had the most amazing sighting of a pair of Verreaux's Eagles cruising by at eye level. Other species here were Eurasian Golden Oriole, Rock Martin, and Speckled Pigeon, and the calls of Striped Pipit echoed from the hillsides. On the way back we picked up European, Square-tailed, and Freckled Nightjars, but the best was yet to come. Leopard hadn't been seen for a good month in the concession, so we didn't really have our hopes up, but we were lucky enough to see one on the road as we were heading back to the lodge. Not only did we see one, but we actually witnessed (through quite a bit of dense foliage) its ambush on an Impala. A leopard kill? Are you joking? I am so glad that I'm not joking – this was a once-in-a-lifetime experience. The Leopard was swift and decisive, and the Impala didn't stand a chance. I still don't know how it was possible that we managed to top off our incredible time in the concession with this sighting, but that's the way it happened.

Day 7, 2nd March 2019 – Travel back to Johannesburg

All good things have to come to an end. We spent our last morning doing one more walking safari, this time from the lodge itself. We walked toward another small seasonal pan, where we found a few White-faced Whistling Ducks, Common Greenshank, Malachite Kingfisher, Knob-billed Duck, and an awesome female Greater Painted-snipe. We also had nice looks at more resident species like Marico Sunbird, Namaqua Dove, and a melanistic Gabar Goshawk. Another nice surprise was seeing a Leopard Tortoise and being able to really get up close and personal. After that we had some brunch, packed our vehicle, and started our journey back to Johannesburg.
